TAFT DEFINES NAME "DEMOCRAT"

Introduced by One to Crowd
at St. Joseph, Mo.

When Man Says I Am a Democrat It
Does Not Indicate Which Way
He Will Vote.

WORD IS ONLY HISTORICAL.

Macon, Mo., Oct. 6.—Judge Taft made three speeches in Kansas and thirteen in Missouri. Eight of the stops in the "Show Me" state were arranged upon urgent demands from the towns through which the speaker was to have passed without stopping.

Throughout the day Taft hammered away on the necessity for this voter of the country to understand that Democratic tariff revision meant the destruction of the market and prices of the products of the farms; that the Republican revision meant the continuation of the present prices and prosperity. He told the Missourians about the Bryan proposal with respect to trusts—that the Nebraskans would distract them by putting trust-made articles on the trust list and by making a law prohibiting the trust from manufacturing or controlling more than 50 per cent of any article. While such a law, Taft believed, would be very difficult to enact, he predicted that its enforcement would be more dangerous.

At South St. Joseph Taft was led into giving his definition of a Democrat, because of the introduction he received to a large gathering of stock yards employees by John Donovan, president of the Stock Exchange at that place. Donovan told the candidate this fallute.

"I don't want to appear before you in a false light. I am a Democrat but I reserve the right to make a friend of a man of opposite political party and I think he deserves it—and I have that kind of a man by my side, one who in every way is a worthy American, a man whose history is known to you. You saw what we got here last year through his liberality when he was secretary of war." Having reference to the great military conference that had been held in St. Louis on "I am not an office seeker and never have been, and no office within the gift of this government or state would I have if it's man's desire. I promise that if he called upon me for any naval duty, I will put anything I have on hand and go to him in a minute."

To this Taft replied:

"Mr. Donovan says that he is a Democrat. That is only a bit of a designation. It does not refer to existing conditions, because there are so many definitions of what a Democrat is and ought to be, that when a man says he is a Democrat it does not tell us exactly how he is going to vote."

Following the stock yards meeting Taft addressed the employees of the Burlington shops, made a speech to a girl at a profit of 25 cents each, thousands at the Union station and when he could not have existed by giving a general review of Bryan's achievements at the one which was packed to the doors.

Afterwards the party continued the trip stopping at many points en route here. Taft's speech at Macon following the lines of his utterances during the day.

BRADLEY SPEECH AT THE OPENING OF THE CAMPAIGN

It is a speech at the campaign opening at Louisville, Senator Bradley.

Its reasons of good wages paid the workingmen in purchasing power has greatly enhanced and in this way has been enabled to buy many articles which he could not buy before.

The same may be said as to other articles, such as household goods, etc., etc.

TAKS OF HOME COMPETITION.

In this way our world of home market has grown up until our internal commerce has reached the enormous sum of forty thousand millions of dollars. Home competition has thus cheapened the price of the articles used. Take watches, for instance. Before the adoption of protection a hunting case gold watch was worth $300, now it can be bought for $75.

The trust stimulated men to build manufactures; it has stimulated home market and it has blessed and prospered the people. Our workingmen not only have more and live better than any others in the world, but have been enabled to educate their children.

was a panic in 1907, for which the more workingmen than he could before so it is to be expected, the demand has increased as the price was reduced. The same may be said as regular toilet use. No other hair preparation is on this scientific basis of destroying the dandruff germs. It stops all irritation, keeps the scalp

sweet, pure and wholesome. Rememmust not be forgotten that during the panic of 1907, prices did not remain constant; that the national treasury was overflowing; we were abroad largely more than we ought, our exports greatly exceed-our imports.

Compare this panic to 1893 under

Gold. The expressed policy of the world is to stick to the old standard of Mr. Bryan and his followers. Under this system, in 1893

after the Democrats went out of power, we had in circulation an average of $22.87 to each inhabitant. From that time the amount was steadily increased until in 1903, at the end of the fiscal year, it had grown to $31.81.

In 1890 the value of our output of manufactures was over $9,000,000;

in 1907 it had grown to nearly $15,- 000,000,000. In 1890 the number of wage-workers was 4,500,000. In 1907 it was nearly 6,000,000. In 1890 the wages paid were $1,500,-

000 and upward. In 1907 they were

$2,600,000,000 and upward. In the last year of Cleveland's administration the balance of trade in our favor was $142,800,000; last year it was $673,000,000. In 1895, under

Democratic administration, the value of the five Republican judges upheld its constitutionality, while three Democratic judges decided to the contrary. By its enforcement by a Republican president some of the trusts have been whipped into subjection, while prosecutions under that, the Elkins law and the Hepburn law (both of which are Republican measures), are pending against many others.

But pray, when did Mr. Bryan grow so blind to trusts? In 1896 he frenetically and lovingly embraced the great silver trusts that contributed $300,000 to his campaign. So blind was he that he saw no impropriety in degrading the currency and compelling every capitalist and laborer to accept a 50-cent dollar in payment of one hundred cents of before indebtedness. Such a proposition of bald-faced robbery was never made to the American people. All the crimes charged to the Standard Oil company pale into insignificance when compared to it.

BERLIN'S DRINK Percentage.

A German physician, Dr. Hirshfeld, has been computing the quantity of alcohol consumed in Berlin. Berlin possesses three years ago 12,892 drinking shops—one for 610 inhabitants—in addition to 301

bars. The Berliners consumed 438,-

532 liters of beer, 24,704,525

liters of brandy, and 19,956,062 liters of wine. This amounts to an average annual consumption per head of population of 236 1/4 liters of alcohol

per head. In this was a candidate for the Berliner grandchild.

Bryan's radical ideas every chance

he has had, and that the candidate

ANNOUNCEMENT.

County Court Clerk.
The Sun is authorized to announce Hiram Smedley a candidate for re-election to the office of Clerk of the McCracken County Court subject to the action of the Democratic party.Daily Thought.
"Remember, youth once gone is gone;
Deeds let escape are never to be done." —Browning.Now, if those Bulgarians are asse enough to get out and offer their lives to protect Prince Ferdinand's throne, Bulgaria will be independent; but the Bulgarians will not be free.

Farmers of the country, who were poor in 1906, refused to bite at the free silver fallacy and the 30-cent dollar. Now that they have money in the bank, they will watch Oklahoma's deposit guaranty a few years before adopting it.

Collections are bad throughout the Black Patch, because half the 1907 tobacco crop remains to be sold. But those who have received their money remember when tobacco sold around three cents.

Governor Haskell's Standard Oil affiliations are important because he was chosen by a presidential candidate for treasurer and gatherer of campaign funds. The government granted the Prairie State Oil and Gas company a franchise to cross Indian lands with its pipe lines, not Oklahoma state lands.

THOSE STANDARD OIL TANKS. Councilman Foreman for the second time has delayed the ordinance, providing for the removal of the Standard Oil company's tanks outside the city limits. They are located in the center of the city along the railroad track and already have caught fire once from a locomotive. The company recognizes the danger by promising in the future to take greater precautions. Insurance companies recognize the danger by raising the rates. The citizens recognize the danger by petitioning the general council to remove the menace. The fire of recognizes the danger by remonstrating with the city council that the tanks be removed outside the city. The matter was referred to the ordinance committee to investigate and the result was the point of view. Yesterday, amuse ordinance introduced. It was put the efforts of Judge Taft's opponent off once more for all the councilmen to investigate; then the ordinance was referred for revision; now points made against him and the next it goes to the city solicitor to ascertain why any further legislation is that The Sun had "thrown up the sponge", when we were just trying to help out with the arraignment of the Standard Oil company for violation of the present ordinance, limiting the amount of oil to be stored in the city. The facts were not disputed and the company was fined. It brazenly set up technical objections and appealed. If a corporation can't afford the time to be in the court for months, and the Republican party. We said he prosecuted monopolies and incurred their hate; we said he joined the people in support of Taft, because an effort was being made to gain control of both parties by the Standard crowd. The nomination of Taft saved the Republican party. We said Judge Taft opposed corporation contributions and that he refused to make political alliance with J. B. Foraker to get the delegates from his own state, because it would involve a "compromise of principle". But he won in spite of Foraker. We said he made a record in the Philippines, which he found in a state of insurrection; in Cuba; at Panama and in quieting the oriental misunderstandings; that while a Judge he enforced the law as he found it and was sustained by the supreme court.

His opponents have been throwing all this up to him as if it was something wrong, and the idea tickled us so much that we snatched it off as the reason why a politician would tremble at the prospect of having as a candidate a man, who has a record for doing things, instead of just talking. —

MARRIAGE MARKETS.

Men and Women Seeking Mates in Ways That Are Peculiar.

The marriage market (or fair) which was held recently at Eausness, in Belgium, has many counterparts elsewhere, says Pearson's Weekly.

In several of the more remote Swiss cantons, for example, there is held what is known as the feast of the garlands. The marriageable maidens assemble at sunset, sing, dance and make merry. Each wears a sprig of flowers on her forehead, and carries a rosebay, tied with bright colored ribbon, in her hands.

If a lad is attracted by a maid he plucks a flower from her bunch. She pretends not to notice, but when the merry-making breaks up at dawn she will, if she reciprocates his feelings, tie the entire bouquet by the ribbon to the handle of the door of the cabin wherein he resides, or, alternately, fling it through the open casement of his bedchamber.

The famous Tunis marriage mart, of which so much has been written, is held twice a year, in the spring and the autumn. The Tunisian girls attend in hundreds, each with her dowry, in coin and jewelry, disposed about her person. The "golden grille of maidenhood" encircles her waist, and in it is an unsheathed dagger. When this is gently removed by a passing gallant, and presently returned, it means that a proposal has been made.

A prettier custom prevails among the Oraouan maidens who, at stated intervals, assemble in the market place. In front of each is a lighted lamp, emblem of conjugal fidelity. A young man feels attracted? He gently blows upon the flame, extinguishing it. The girl rejoices; it is a rejection. If she leaves it alone, the implied offer is acceptable.

Even in England these curious markets are not unknown, although they are not openly acknowledged as such. One has been held on St. Martha's Hill, Surrey, on each recurring Good Friday, during some centuries. And the statute and moe fair that are still celebrated in various rural localities are marriage marts in all but name.

Magic and Poison Rings. The ring began when man thrust his finger through a hole in a pretty shell, and later learned to make rings of jet. The ring is very magical. Lord Ruthven, who helped to kill Cleopatra, gave Queen Mary a ring which was soven against poison, and the generously studded with the present of her father's wonderful jeweled dagger, of French work, no longer in existence. Whether Ruthven tool with this magical weapon in the affair of Riecle or used a cheaper article is uncertain.

In all events Mary based on the ring that was an antidote to poison a charge of sorcery against Ruthven. The judges of Jeanne d'Arc regarded with much suspicion her little ring of base metal, a gift from her parents interwoven with the sacred names, Jesus Maria.

It was usual to touch the girdle of saints with rings; Jeanne d'Arc said that her ring had touched the body of St. Catherine, whether she meant of the actual saint or a relic of the saint, brought from Sinai to Flurbols. The ring might contain a relic, or, later, a miniature. I fear that I do not believe in the virtues or vices of poison rings. Our ancestors practically knew no poison, but arsenic, and Carthaginian selenite can scarcely have enabled Hannibal to poison himself with a drug contained under the stone of a ring. —Andrew Lang, in London Post.

The baron looked at the key; he touched the silver box; his hand rested for a moment on the sword.

"It is a marvelous story. It is wonderful! Can it be true—can it be true?" murmured the ambassador.

"The documents will be the best evidence. We can settle the matter in twenty-four hours," said Judge Taft.

"You will pardon me for seeming incredulous, sir," said the baron, "but it is all so extraordinary. And these men, these prisoners!"

"They have pursued me under the impression that I am Frederick Augustus, old enough, I, too, am Frederick Augustus," and Armitage smiled.

"I was within a few months of being a prisoner and Durand in prison in which they captured my cigarette case.

It had belonged to Frederick, and the Archduke gave it to me—and my trouble began. The emperor-king was old and ill. The disorders in Hungary were to cloak the assassination of Emperor Karl's beloved son, was to be installed upon the throne."

"Yes; there has been a conspiracy."

"And there have been conspirators. Two of them are safely behind that door, and somewhat through the efforts of their chief, Winkler, should now be under arrest in Vienna. I have reasons, besides my pledge to Archduke Karl, for taking an active part in these affairs. A year ago I gave Karl's reputation of his secret son to Count Ferdinand von Stroh, the prime minister. The statesman was soon from him for the Winkler disorders by these men we have been locked up in this house."

The ambassador's eyes blazed with excitement as these statements fell like one from Armitage's lips, but Armitage went on:

"I trust that my plan for bringing these men will meet with your approval. They have chartered the steamer of the Danube, a fresh carrying steamer or at Morgan's wharf in Baltimore, which they expected to make off when they had finished with me. At the same time, I had some idea of hindering them.

"Yes, I saw— and saw you would better leave him to the door. His treason, I tell you! And if you see Shirley, tell her I am John Armitage, tell her I am John Armitage, John Armitage."

The room and its figures, flushed by the fire, and not to speak of the room where they can't dry laundry. And, look! I tell you, you are the time I follow in the world and the queen and I are the last, and I want to take your hand before I go to sleep for I'm sick.
